MIDWEST KEYBOARD CONFERENCE TO BRING HARPSICHORD, FORTE-PIANO ENTHUSIASTS TO UD

DAYTON, Ohio — There will be a musical relay of sorts performed during the Midwest Historic Keyboard Society conference May 13-15 at the University of Dayton.

Books I and II of Johann Sebastian Bach's Well-Tempered Clavier will be performed in a play-through, or an informal concert where each performer starts where the other left off, during the conference that's expected to bring more than 100 keyboard enthusiasts to Dayton.

Using a variety of period instruments and personal piano techniques, musicians will perform Book I at 7 p.m. on Friday, May 14, in the Kettering Residence Hall conference room, and Book II will be performed at 10 a.m. and 2:30 p.m. on Saturday, May 15, in the same conference room. Tickets for each performance are $10 for adults and $5 for students. However, any high school or college students with a copy of the music will be admitted free.

"Because there will be many instrument builders here, the play-through will be able to take advantage of many different harpsichords and forte-pianos," said Richard Benedum, chair of UD's music department. About 12 harpsichord and forte-piano builders from around the country will have instruments on display. There will also be an exhibit of early published editions of the Well-Tempered Clavier.

In addition to the displays and workshops, there will be two other concerts, also open to the public.

Harpsichordist David Schulenberg, a professor at the University of North Carolina and author of The Keyboard Music of J.S. Bach, and Mary Oleskiewicz, a Baroque flutist and doctoral student at the University of North Carolina, will perform a Baroque chamber music concert with several other musicians at 8 p.m. on Thursday, May 13, in Sears Recital Hall of the Jesse Philips Humanities Building. Tickets are $18 for adults, $16 for senior citizens and $8 for students.

The Dayton Bach Society will perform the closing concert at 8 p.m. on Saturday, May 15, at the Seventh-Day Adventist Church, 3939 Stonebridge Road, in Kettering. The program will feature several musicians who are recognized as experts in the Baroque period including oboists Geoffrey Burgess, who performs with an early music ensemble in Paris; Sara Funkhauser, who is retired from Kansas State University, and cellist Elisabeth Reed; a graduate of the Early Music Institute at Indiana University.

Harpsichordist Julane Rodgers, an adjunct professor in UD's department of music; violinist David Wilson, a Baroque violinist from Oakland, Calif.; and flutist Kim Pineda, another graduate of the Early Music Institute at Indiana University, will perform the Triple Concerto in A Minor. John Wesley Wright, a tenor and artist-in-residence at UD, will be one of three soloists.
